Limiting Speed of Trucks Opposed by Developer

by Elaine Skolnik

In a telegram to the city on July 12, Sidney J. Brown, developer of Beltway Plaza, warned that he would bring "injunctive proceedings" against the city if its action of July 10 to reduce the truck speed limit to 15 miles per hour on Breezewood Drive and Cherrywood Lane is not withdrawn. Council, upon the recommendation of its consulting engineering firm of Greenhorne and O'Mara, reduced the speed limit on these roads primarily for safety reasons. The new speed limit will go into effect as soon as signs are prepared and posted, according to city manager James K. Giese.

Brown said that the city's action was "arbitrary and capricious" and would "double costs and double time" of his hauling operations. Trucks carrying earth from the Beltway slope adjacent to Klein's use Breezewood and Cherrywood to get to the Springhill Lake industrial tract where they dump the fill. In addition, intermittently over the next three years, contractors doing excavation work for the Metro Transit System will extensively utilize Cherrywood to carry earth to the industrial site.

The city has complied with a recent request made by Steve Zieba Jr., project manager for Savoy Construction Co., contractors performing the slope improvements, to post signs on Breezewood cautioning motorists to watch out for trucks which exit from a point at the top of the slope onto Breezewood. In addition the city has installed a stop sign for trucks at this exit.

Zieba also has expressed fears for the safety of pedestrians who use the truck road as a pathway to get to the Beltway Plaza Shopping Center and of children, who play in the area of the slope. Since the "No Trespassing" signs were being ignored, he asked for the presence of city police to act as a deterrent. City Manager James Giese said that it is basically the owner's responsibility to enforce no trespassing on his property. The police, he said, will respond if called, but the owner should be prepared to swear out a warrant. Zieba said he would not want to do the latter.

Zieba also complained that with the speed limit for cars remaining at 25 miles per hour, the safety hazard will be increased since cars will be trying to pass trucks on a road with only one travel lane in each direction. The road is further narrowed, he noted, by cars parking on one side.

Last Thursday, State Water Resources Administration officials and representatives of the consulting firm of Robert Balter inspected the work done on the slope. The Balter plan is being used to correct the badly eroded slope. Everyone was quite satisfied with the work done so far. Some small recommendations were made to improve sedimentation control. Seepage areas are also being watched, especially in that area below the bus lot maintenance building where the earth has slumped.

Churchill Confirmed To Planning Board

On July 11, the Prince George's County Council approved County Executive William W. Gullett's nomination of Dr. John W. Churchill, of Greenbelt, as a Prince George's County Planning Board member and Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commissioner. Dr. Churchill, an associate professor of recreation at the University of Maryland, replaces F. Richard Malzone whose term as commissioner ended on June 30.

No Paper Pickup

There will be no paper pick-up again this week as the city has no outlet for the paper.

Community-University Day On Sunday, July 23

There will be something of interest for everyone at the University of Maryland's third annual Community-University Day on Sunday, July 23. Of special interest to the children will be three puppet shows, roller skating provided by a mobile van, swimming at Cole Field House, a live snake show, and a dog obedience training demonstration. A horse show and zoo will also be offered.

For older boys and their dads, there will be a judo demonstration and ACC tournament films on basketball, among other programs of interest. Seven buses will constantly circle the campus, picking up visitors. An information booth on the parking lots will provide printed programs. Events will take place rain or shine, between noon and 6 p.m., at no cost. The public is invited.

In the Student Union, as well as in the Armory, there will be extensive displays of arts and crafts, from copper enameling to macramé work. Jass and dance workshops will be featured at other locations, and an extra performance of Shakespeare's "The Tempest" will be presented free at 2 p.m., in Fine Arts Theatre.

Greenbelters associated with the all-day program are Dr. Virginia Beauchamp, public relations, City manager James K. Giese, advisory council, and Dr. John Churchill, program.

Agriculture Activities

Agricultural activities will again be a big part of Community-University Day. For the kiddies - and their parents - there will be tours of the livestock barns beginning at 2:15 p.m. In the dairy barns they will see calves and watch cows being milked. Other barns will provide "see and touch" views of horses and sheep. An incubator will show chicks being hatched.

At the nearby apiary, Dr. Dewey M. Caron will supervise a live observation bee hive.

In the 3-year-old Animal Sciences Center, staff members will present illustrated talks on food poisoning, food additives and careers in food science.

Horticulture department staff members will present lectures and practical demonstrations on new and improved food products, plant propagation, organic gardening and problems in summer vegetable gardens. Caroline C. Beane will conduct the annual sick plant clinic where the public may bring diseased plant materials for diagnosis, in a tent along Campus Drive. Hours will be noon to 5 p.m.

M.D. Carnival

A neighborhood Carnival for the benefit of muscular dystrophy victims will be held on July 22 at 11 a.m. at 16 Woodland Way. Ringmaster Michael Bates will be assisted by John Lichvar, Chris Bates, and Tommy Coloe. Penny Pitch, Sponge Throw, Auction and other games will be offered.

National Symphony At Greenbelt Park

As part of their "Summer in the Parks" program, the National Symphony Orchestra will present free concerts at Greenbelt Park on Fri., July 21, Wed., Aug. 9 and Tues., Aug. 22. The concerts will be held at 8 p.m.

Greenbelt Rd. Traffic Project Still Delayed

Pauline Menes of the Maryland House of Delegates informed the city that the State Roads Commission (SRC) advised her that the traffic control project for Kenilworth Avenue and Greenbelt Rd. as well as Edmonston Road and Greenbelt Rd. has been held up because of a delay in obtaining the equipment necessary for new traffic control devices.

The Maryland State Highway Administration has plans for temporarily closing the opening in the median strip at Edmonston and Greenbelt Rds. and turning off the traffic signal at that point. The left-hand lane for eastbound traffic on Greenbelt Rd. will be extended to turn left on Kenilworth. The light at Kenilworth and Greenbelt Rds. will then be recycled, probably with the addition of a left-turn signal on Greenbelt Road so that eastbound and westbound traffic will turn left at the same time, while a separate signal controls traffic in the forward direction.

Eventually all the traffic lights along Greenbelt Rd. from Kenilworth to the railroad bridge will be synchronized so that a car proceeding at an average speed can go straight through.

CITY NOTES

Despite the announcement that there would be no paper pickup last Friday, many residents set out papers for collection. All such paper was picked up by the city in order to keep it from blowing around. But all of it was deposited at the city landfill. The city has no storage facilities for recyclable trash, and since three different plants which normally process paper have been closed because of flood damage, it may be some time before the recycling process can begin again. Till then residents should store their own papers.

Attendance at the swimming pool has been light this season because of generally cool weather and frequent rainstorms. The largest attendance figure for the summer was recorded on Sunday, July 16, when temperatures rose above 90°.

The city noted an increase in complaints concerning refuse collections. Most common were complaints about missed pickups and about the personal language of some collectors. In order to reduce such complaints, Public Works Director Albert Attick held a joint meeting recently with all members of the refuse crews. Although the crew is up to full strength, absenteeism has been a considerable problem this summer.

The Parks crew recently laid down 600 square yards of sod along the roadway in the Lake Park to control erosion. The general crew has continued with street patching throughout the city, as well as with repainting of traffic lines. The underpass near Center School was also cleaned and repainted, in preparation for a new mural by children in the Arts and Crafts program. On rainy days some of the men constructed templates to be used in painting traffic arrows on city streets. Others repaired playground equipment.

X-Ray & Diabetes Mobile Units Here

Henry Fisher, of the Greenbelt Lions Club, announces that on Aug. 4 the Prince Georges Health Dept. X-ray and Diabetes Mobile units will be on the center mall at 8 a.m. until 2 p.m. This is free for all Greenbelters or anyone else.

GHI Board Uncertain On How To Handle CMP Proposals

by Al and Elaine Skolnik

In an indirect way, the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. board of directors gave some indication at its Thursday, July 13, meeting of how it was viewing the role of its newly-created Executive Committee, which had caused so much dissension at its June 22 meeting. This 5-person Committee, consisting of the GHI officers and chairman of the member relations committee, has the major task of planning the agenda for meetings and shaping up issues for presentation to the full board, but some of its other duties have remained vague.

In a vote that may take on increasing significance, the board split 5-3 on an issue involving the extent of the Executive Committee's decision-making powers. The issue came up with respect to a court request for permission to establish a painting pattern even though one member of the court would not go along. The regulations provide that the board can establish such a pattern when the court cannot agree.

The majority of the board - Nat Shinderman, Norman Weyel, Janet James, Donald Volk and Tony Lynch - felt that this item was of such minor operational nature that the final disposition of it could be left to the Executive Committee. "This would be in keeping with our intent and that of the CMP management survey to get the board out of these areas that involve no major policy or cost elements," said Shinderman.

The minority - Tom White, Howard Brooks, and Dave Lange - did not feel that the Executive Committee was established with the idea of taking on decision-making powers.

CMP Survey

The problem of how to further implement the many recommendations of the CMP survey came up many times during the evening. The board finally decided to hold a committee of the whole meeting on Tuesday, July 25, to thresh the thing out, but this decision was not made until after some of the issues were discussed.

One issue discussed in particular concerned the hiring of a director of member relations. CMP had recommended such a director because of what it felt was a pressing need to improve two-way communications between the board and the membership.

Opposition to this idea was expressed by some of the 30 persons present. Ben Elkins said that "you don't need a director of member relations. What you need is common sense," and told the board "to get close to the people and find out what they are thinking." A director of member relations, he said, would only be adding an extra layer of management. "Don't bring people in from the outside," he advised, "use our own GHI members." Vincent Caruso stressed that "our problem is not management but heating."

In reply to Elkins, Lynch, chairman of the member relations committee, said that his committee is in the process of compiling a list of GHI members who have expert capabilities. However, he noted that the board is made up of part-time persons who have a livelihood to make and who cannot spend full time on developing membership relations. "This," he said, "is a job for a paid professional."

Another issue concerned how to best get membership input and reaction to the various CMP suggestions. One proposal was for the board or a board-appointed committee to conduct a series of public hearings. A modification suggested by Janet James was to have this group go into individual courts and survey members at their homes rather than to count on members to come to a hearing place. Such a group would presumably help summarize pros and cons of each issue to help final membership decision.

TAA Survey

Concern over the TAA structural survey proposals was expressed from the floor. Caruso said the proposal to convert to electric heat has upset many people and referred to a group that has asked a certified boiler engineer to survey GHI plants and records to see what alternatives there are to electric heat. Board member Brooks reported that when he had asked management to give this engineer access to the plant and records, he was told that this was a decision for the board to make. Brooks expressed his indignation at this "put-off", stating that any member has the right of access to the plant and records. "This refusal was inexcusable and irresponsible with a capital I," he said stridently. "One could get the impression that you have something to hide. No wonder the members feel disgusted."

Shinderman explained that there is a long-fixed policy that no individual board member has the authority to direct management to do anything which involves the resources and time of the GHI staff. To do so would mean nine different persons giving orders and would render the management incapable of carrying on its regular responsibilities, he said.

GHI president Jim Smith further elaborated that while files are accessible to the members, management is definitely limited by its staff and time to how much work it can perform for individual requests.

The board then made clear that it favored all the help it can get from the membership in the way of expertise on heating and other maintenance problems. After satisfying itself as to the merits of the request, it directed the manager to cooperate with the engineer that was being brought in by the group.

Audit Debate

There were also some heated words between Brooks and the board regarding a proposal to change the outside auditors. The present auditors, J. Henry Oehmann and Company, had been doing the work for several years and the board had received suggestions to switch auditors as a routine policy matter. The Executive Committee, however, after soliciting proposals from other companies, decided to go along with Oehmann for another year and was now seeking the full board's approval.

GHI treasurer White explained that some of the factors influencing the Committee were that the auditor was knowledgeable about GHI procedures, had provided good services, including unsolicited advice in improving operations and in pointing out deficiencies, the financial arrangements were most advantageous, and the timing for change was inappropriate because of the June 30 closing of books.

Brooks said that he was very dissatisfied with the reports of Oehmann, that they were archaic, hard to understand, and that it was good practice to change every few years "to let some fresh air in." Lange said that the CMP people had recommended against change for change's sake. The final vote was 7 to 1 to retain the present auditor (chairman not voting).

Other Matters

The board approved a masonry flat reroofing program proposed by TAA which would involve some new procedures in reroofing. If this approach is successful in preventing leaks, the specifications worked out by the TAA engineers will be used for other houses.

The board also went on record in favor of a tax differential bill relating to municipalities sponsored by county councilman Francis W. White. This bill would provide tax sharing for duplicate services provided by cities and counties.

Minutes

Earlier in the meeting an hour was devoted to getting approval of meeting minutes that had accumulated over the past few weeks. There was some discussion over the intended scope of the minutes, with the newly-elected board members inclined to favor more detailed coverage. See GHI BOARD p. 2

Fire Fighters Answer

To the Editor:

An article appeared in your paper on Thursday, June 22 from the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department warning of a group of professional solicitors seeking funds for a firefighter scholarship fund. They claimed that they knew nothing of the group nor did they condone the actions. They forgot to mention that the Prince Georges County Volunteer Fireman's Association also uses professional solicitors to seek ads for their annual convention book and that the group they mention above are representing the Prince Georges County Professional Fire Fighters. The solicitors are not simply seeking donations, but instead are selling tickets to a Country & Western Jamboree being sponsored by my association to star such names as Sonny James, Faron Young and George Hamilton IV at Rosecroft Raceway on September 16.

With a dual standard (paid & volunteer) fire services such as ours it is very easy for people to misinterpret our sales pitch and not really know which group is being supported. So you can see why the volunteers would be concerned, naturally being afraid that the people in their jurisdictions would be led to believe that they are supporting the local company when we call.

I hope that you might print some form of rebuttal simply informing the people of Greenbelt that our show is for real and that the solicitors, many of them teenagers earning summer money, are representing the Professional Firefighters Association. Thank you.

Dog Drags Off Pets

To the Editor:

On Sunday afternoon between 6 and 6:30 p.m. a large German Shepherd, with traces of brown and white, was left unattended on Maplewood Court and Greenbelt Lake.

The dog came up on our patio, tore open a very secure cage, (soldered) and dragged off our white Chinchilla pet rabbit. We use the word dragged because tufts of rabbit hair were found around the cage and on the wires. Having disposed of that pet, the dog returned and was viewed carrying off our squealing black pet rabbit. As we were alerted to the danger, the dog was viewed again sniffing around the cage for a further delicacy.

We searched in vain for our pet rabbits, the dog, or the owners. The tragedy has occurred. Naturally the pets cannot be recalled. It will be up to us to make explanations to two distressed children at home and thirty distressed children in the classroom as to the loss of their pets.

But wouldn't it have been much better if the owners of the dog had followed the laws of our community and kept their pet within the confines of their property or on a leash.

If they had, our pets would still be alive.

Signs

To the Editor:

Greenbelt, like all cities, has signs for speed limits, no bicycle riding in Center, no dumping, etc., etc. These are great if they are enforced.

Take the one on "No bicycle riding in Center." My wife and I like to sit on the benches in the Center, but find that its aggravating because of the bicycles going around consistently. One day in 1½ hours I counted 25 bicycles, not only children but also parents with children on the back seat.

Next we'll take the ones on "No Ball Playing" and "Fire Lanes". These are needed but in many cases are behind hedges.

We definitely do need signs warning motorists "to look out for children at play." The way some people race around Greenbelt, it's a miracle we have the good safety record that we do. How anyone can be so asinine as to say that the measure will be non-productive in that motorists soon get used to the signs and no longer take cognizance of them is beyond my comprehension. That being the case, maybe we should remove all signs, other cities do the same, and let people just run rampant.

We have a police force and I think they should see that these regulations are enforced. They do pretty good on speed limits, let them do as well on the others.

erage of discussions. GHI secretary Norman Weyel explained that the minutes can get very lengthy under such conditions and the board generally indicated approval of the present policy of confining minutes to action items and relevant statements thereof.

In the course of reviewing the June 1 minutes, White wanted it to be known that if present at that meeting he would have taken exception to Edward Burgoon's remarks made after submitting the nominations and elections committee report in which Burgoon objected "to the petty challenges and harassment that the Committee had been subjected to during the past year."

GDC Meeting

At a meeting preceding the GHI meeting, the stockholders of the Greenbelt Development Corporation, owner of the Parkway apartments, elected a new GDC board which included the present GHI board members (except Shinderman and James who declined to run) and one non-GHI board member, Ben Rosenzweig. To fill out the 9-member board, the board took the precedent of naming one former GHI member, Darwin Beck, a Greenbelt resident. The first GDC board meeting will be on July 27.

Court of Appeals Decision

The Maryland Court of Appeals in a decision issued July 10 left up in the air the issue of whether the Prince Georges charter could prohibit county council from granting conditional zoning. The case, Clayman vs. Prince Georges County, had originally been decided on May 11 as prohibiting conditional zoning but was reheard when the issue was raised whether the Maryland General Assembly (which granted the county council power to grant conditional zoning) was having its authority usurped by the charter.

Instead, the court decided to deny the conditional zoning on other grounds.

Greenbelt Officials Active In Md. Municipal League

by Virginia Beauchamp

Every member of the Greenbelt City Council will be included this year in a major effort of the Maryland Municipal League to develop a comprehensive policy position on issues of concern to municipalities. These positions, based on prior work of the National League of Cities, will be hammered out by a number of committees, meeting from time to time throughout the year.

Greenbelt mayor, Richard Pilski, at the annual meeting of the Maryland League, June 25-28 in Ocean City, was elected to the 25-member executive committee, governing body of the organization. Other council members accepted committee assignments as follows: Charles Schwan, resolutions; Gil Weidenfeld, environmental quality; Elizabeth Maffay, community development; and Rhea Cohen, transportation. In addition, Police Chief William Lane is a member of the public safety committee.

At the June meeting the League, as a body, adopted several policy statements to be forwarded to the executive and legislative branches of the state and federal governments. Among these was a recommendation that the present exemption from taxation of municipal bonds be continued or that any revenue loss to cities from withdrawal of such exemption be made up for by some form of federal subsidy.

On the state level the League recommended that the Maryland Public Service Commission, which regulates utilities operations, be organized on the basis of geographical representation and that its membership be increased. The League also urged that all actions of the Commission be taken only after opportunities for full public hearings had been afforded.

Two new policy statements of the League dealt with public safety. The League went on record as endorsing the idea that law enforcement is basically a local—that is, a municipal and county, rather than a state—function. For this reason, the League also urged that greater municipal representation be allowed on the Governor's Commission on Law Enforcement, which administers both state and federal funds, such as those authorized by the Safe Streets Act. The League also urged development of police-community relations programs.

Recycling Programs

Finally, taking note of a growing issue in citizen consciousness, the League urged both federal and state governments to take the initiative in creating markets for recycled materials and to provide financial assistance for municipalities which undertake their own programs for disposal of solid waste.

This conference of the League allotted a greater proportion of time to business meetings and less to workshop type programs than had been the case at previous conferences. Among workshop meetings which attracted Greenbelt representatives was one on finances and property tax at which state senator Steny Hoyer spoke on the need for new revenue sources.

Mrs. Cohen attended a meeting on open spaces and Maryland environmental services in waste and water management. From information derived from this workshop, she reported that a possibility exists of state assistance on the establishment of municipal reclamation centers.

City manager James K. Giese attended a session on a new federal program to provide assistance for training personnel in public employment and for improving personnel management. Called the Intergovernmental Personnel Act, the program includes such activities as opening federal training programs to local governmental employees. (Both Giese and City Treasurer Mabel Kandler have previously taken advantage of such training opportunities in the Washington area.)

Federal funds are also available for coordinating training programs for personnel among various local governments. Both the Maryland Municipal League and the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) are currently developing such programs.

Giese also attended a meeting of city and town administrators at which a start was made to organize department-level personnel of similar positions in local governments to work on problems of mutual concern. For example, organizations of public works directors, finance officers, recreation directors, and police chiefs were envisaged.

Prince Georges Members

Although the League is a statewide organization of municipalities, Prince Georges County officials this year hold a major share of positions on the executive committee. Neal Powell, mayor of Tanneytown, was elected president of the organization. Eight other county officials, besides Pilski and Powell, also hold executive committee posts, including councilwoman Elizabeth Dougherty of College Park, councilman Earl Schmitt of Riverdale, councilman John Delbruegge of New William Wildman of Bowie, Mayor Carrollton, and mayor Charles Armentrout of Hyattsville.

P. G. Air Pollution Grant

The Prince Georges County Health Department has been awarded a federal grant of $86,809 for continuation of the air pollution control program in the county, according to Congressman Larry Hogan.

The main objective of the air pollution program in Prince Georges County is to enforce the state air pollution control law. Through previous federal grants, the health department has set up 17 air sampling stations around the county to determine the overall quality of the air.

SWIM TEAM NEWS

by Mike "Turtle" Jones

What was probably Greenbelt's closest meet of the year turned out a final score favorable to Greenbelt 259½ - 234½, and left behind the Greenbelt trademark which was seven new additions to the Landover Pool record book.

For Nicolette Durantine, it has become almost a routine matter to set pool records in 8 and under freestyle and backstroke, which she did last week. The same can be said about 14 year old Sue Smith who took the Landover pool records in 13 and 14 backstroke and freestyle. Other records were set by Kevin Shaughnessy in 13 and 14 butterfly, George Jones in 15-17 butterfly, and Lynn Labukas in 9 and 10 breast stroke.

High point scorers in the meet were Mariette Vanderzon (15), Sue Smith (15), Nicolette Durantine (15), Jeff Douglas (15), Lynn Labukas (15), Kevin Shaughnessy (13), George Jones (13), Jim Vanderzon (13), Cindy Davis (13), Olga Penney (11), and Colleen Davis (10½).

This Saturday, Greenbelt will swim its fourth meet against Brandywine at the Brandywine pool. Swimmers and officials should be ready to leave the Greenbelt pool by 7:30 because of the distance between Greenbelt and Brandywine.
